

Update: Your Tax Adviser from 2026

Briefings

27 October 2025

Earlier this year, we conducted a survey of Tax Adviser readers. We explained that we were reviewing the number of hard copies printed each year due to the rising cost of paper and postage, as well as the environmental impact of printing. We asked for your preferences regarding the number of magazines you would like to receive and how you currently read Tax Adviser. We received over 300 responses and are grateful to everyone who shared their views. It was clear that there was no appetite to move to a completely digital format, but at the same time, a sizeable number of readers access Tax Adviser both in print and online, or exclusively online.

After discussion with our publisher, LexisNexis, we are pleased to update you on the future of Tax Adviser from 2026. At present, there are ten print editions each year, which are also uploaded to the Tax Adviser website.

From January 2026, there will be bi-monthly print editions (six per year) alongside monthly online updates on the website — so you will hear from Tax Adviser 12 times a year.

The print issues (February, April, June, August, October, December) will be bumper editions, larger than the current print copies, with a 'best of' the online content and feature articles on major themes or recent trends in taxation, as well as a 'Tax Roundup' section summarising key news and changes from the preceding two months. The monthly online updates will provide a mix of fresh content — including articles, tax technical insights, and briefings.

We are also working to improve the accessibility of our online articles and will keep you updated as this progresses.

We look forward to sharing Tax Adviser with you in its new, enhanced format from 2026.
