ATT Award in R&D Tax Relief Essentials

Briefings

May 2026

21 April 2026

The ATT has partnered with The R&D Community to offer a dedicated online qualification in R&D tax relief. Designed for those working in tax who want to learn more about R&D relief, this concise, practically focused qualification is delivered and assessed entirely online.

The award is pitched at an introductory level and is ideal if you are not an R&D specialist, but would like to understand more about the rules. It will enable you to have better informed conversations with your clients about R&D tax relief, as well as spot potential risks and opportunities.

No prior knowledge of R&D tax relief is required, but a decent grasp of the basic corporation tax rules will be assumed.

The award is delivered and examined entirely online. Training is via a combination of short, digestible videos and required reading, with multiple-choice quizzes to check your knowledge as you go. You'll also receive a 30 minute call with an R&D expert to discuss any questions you may have about the content and how to apply it in practice.

As content is available on-demand and can be worked through at your own pace, it can fit around any other commitments you may have.

Total fees, including registration and resources, are £670 plus VAT.

More information, including how to register for the award, is available on the ATT website.
