ATT Award in R&D Tax Relief Essentials: registration now open

Briefings

September 2026

24 August 2026

ATT is pleased to announce that registrations are now open for its new Award in R&D Tax Relief Essentials.

ATT has partnered with The R&D Community to offer this new dedicated online qualification in R&D tax relief. Designed for those working in tax who want to learn more about R&D relief, the concise, practically focused qualification is delivered and assessed entirely online.

The award is pitched at an introductory level and is ideal if you are not an R&D specialist but would like to understand more about the rules. It will enable you to have better informed conversations with your clients about R&D tax relief, as well as helping you to spot potential risks and opportunities.

No prior knowledge of R&D tax relief is required, but a decent grasp of the basic corporation tax rules will be assumed.

Training is delivered through a combination of short, digestible videos and required reading, with multiple-choice quizzes to check your knowledge as you go. You'll also receive a 30 minute call with an R&D expert to discuss any questions you may have about the content and how to apply it in practice.

The content is available on-demand and can be worked through at your own pace, allowing the qualification to fit around your other commitments.

Total fees, including registration and resources, are £670 + VAT.

More information, including how to register for the award, is available on the ATT website.

Emma Rawson